CINCH

Dressed in a minute.

Every morning: outfits built from your own closet, chosen for the day's weather, plans, and your taste.

CINCH

The group chat, answered.

Post the dinner. Friends pin looks from their own closets, vote — and everyone walks in decided.

9:41

EVENT

Dana's birthday dinner

Sat, Aug 8, 7:30 PM · Bar Ideale · Feels 70°, clear evening

BIRTHDAY DINNER · TABLE FOR 6 · SOMETHING FESTIVE

Going

YOUR LOOK

Cream & Cognac

cream sweater, cognac boots

3 PICKS FROM THE TABLE

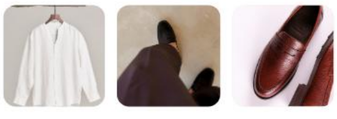

Swap a piece | Share another

WHO'S WEARING WHAT — 2 OF 5 SHARED

ME You

cream sweater, cognac boots

D Dana

white blouse, charcoal trousers

Two of you are in cream. Yours reads differently with the cognac boots.

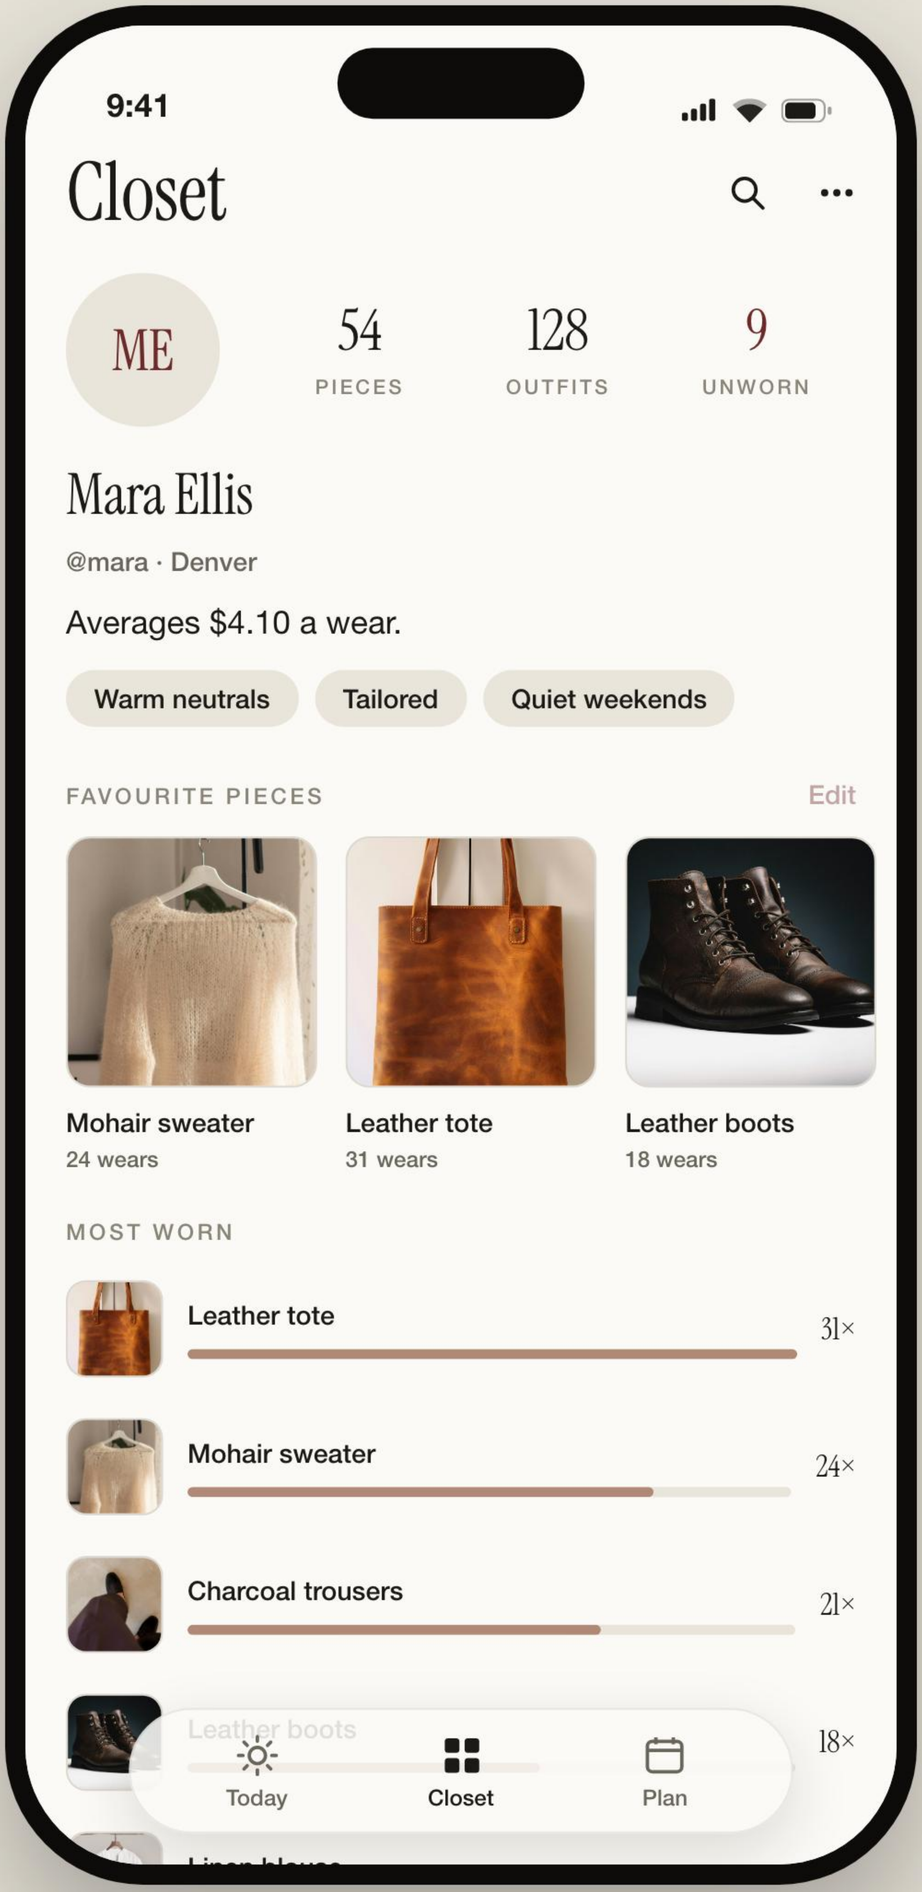

Every option

All the looks, with picks

CINCH

You own 54 pieces. Nine, never worn.

Cinch counts every wear — cost-per-wear, the favourites, the never-worn — so you can see the difference.

CINCH

A stylist that never sells you anything.

It answers from your real closet — and says so, plainly, when you don't own the right thing.

9:41

Stylist

Only your clothes — nothing invented

Dinner at 7, then drinks after — what works?

The cream mohair over your charcoal trousers. Warm enough for a patio, and the loafers carry it from the table to the bar. You've worn the pairing twice — it works.

cream sweater, charcoal trousers, brown loafers, brown crossbody

Could I do black tie with this closet?

No — nothing you own is formal enough for black tie, and I won't invent a gown you don't have. The closest true thing: the white linen blouse tucked into the charcoal trousers. Smart, not black tie.

Want me to keep an eye on what the closet is missing?

Ask about tonight…

CINCH

The week, already decided.

Seven days laid out against the forecast — and no piece worn more than twice.

